Tetsuya is a Japanese university student. One day, he received a notebook from an American woman who came to Japan on a trip. On the first page, there was a letter in English written by a girl, and he found her address, too. The letter said:

Hello, my name is Ellen. I am sixteen. I live in Canada. My dream is to travel around the world in the future and make a lot of friends.

Last month, some teachers and students from England visited our school. We enjoyed studying and talking together. One of the students talked about her dream. Her dream was to be a photographer. She took a lot of pictures when she was here in my town. She showed me some pictures, and they were beautiful. After I talked with her, I wanted to do something for ①my dream, too. I cannot travel around the world because I have to go to school and I don't have enough money. But this notebook can go anywhere instead of me. So I decided to send this notebook around the world.

Please help me by following these four rules.

- 1. Please write anything you want on the pages. Of course you can write in your own language.
- 2. Many people will read it, so please don't write anything which will make someone (②).
- 3. After you have finished writing in the notebook, please give it to someone else.

If you receive this notebook after July 1,2019, please 3.

4. I'm excited to think about where my notebook will go. How many countries will this notebook travel to? What will people write in it? Thank you for your help.

When Tetsuya received Ellen's notebook, it had 29 messages from people from eight different countries. He enjoyed reading a short story written by an old man in China. He also found a song a young girl in Australia wrote. Everyone followed Ellen's rules.

He thought about what he should write. He started ______. "It will be useful if Ellen visits Japan in the future," he thought. After he finished writing, he closed the notebook and he didn't forget to follow Ellen's last rule. The date was July 2,2019, so he went to the post office.

Two weeks later, Ellen received her notebook and enjoyed reading it.
